English Version

GALLIMARD, France's third-largest publishing house (which includes NRF, Denoël and Mercure de France) was founded at the beginning of the 20th century by Gaston Gallimard, and is headed today by the founder's grandson, Antoine Gallimard. Its reputation for independence and quality publishing is legendary.

Gallimard's catalogue of 17,000 titles and 7,000 authors boasts one of Europe's most prestigious literary lists, in both French and foreign literature. It includes Proust, Gide, Saint-John Perse, Artaud, Sartre, Beauvoir, Camus, Genet, Céline, Char, Aragon, Malraux, Yourcenar, Ionesco, Sarraute, Duras, Quignard, Tournier, Modiano, Le Clézio and Glissant, as well as current literary lights Daniel Pennac, Sylvie Germain and Patrick Chamoiseau.

In foreign literature, Gallimard has published the works of Dos Passos, Hemingway, Faulkner, Kafka, Joyce, D. H. Lawrence, Nabokov, Thomas Mann, Steinbeck, Eliade, Capote, Borges, Golding, Pasternak, Tagore, Bellow, Kerouac, Mishima, Patrick White, Peter Handke, Octavio Paz, Milan Kundera, John Updike, William Styron, Philip Roth, Kenzaburô Oé, Graham Swift and Ian McEwan, to name only a few.

The non-fiction list is equally strong ; it comprises, among other seminal thinkers and historians, Freud, Gramsci, Heidegger, Aron, Wittgenstein, Foucault, Duby, Le Goff and Le Roy Ladurie.

The prestigious Pléiade leather-bound collection of classical works is the most distinguished imprint of the house, and the remarkable Gallimard-Jeunesse list of children's books (both fiction and non-fiction) has acquired a worldwide reputation for excellence and originality.

Gallimard's authors have been translated around the world (more than 500 contracts are signed every year) and its acquisition department makes sure that the best foreign authors also find their place in the 4,000-title-strong catalogue of its Du Monde entier imprint.

Over 750 new titles and 2,000 reprints are published every year by Gallimard, with distribution handled by its own distribution company, Sodis. Folio, the company's paperback imprint, alone sells 14 million volumes a year. Gallimard owns a half-dozen bookstores, including one in Montreal and the Schoenhof's Foreign Books store located in Harvard Square in Cambridge, Massachusetts.
